

WOODBURY UNIVERSITY ROME CENTER FOR ARCHITECTURE AND CULTURE

In Rome history shapes a future generation of architects.

Woodbury University's Rome Center for Architecture and Culture (RCAC) performs as an educational, research, and outreach center based in one of the world's oldest cities. From piazze to palazzi, Rome and its layered history offer lessons that transform students from visitors into global citizens expert at rapidly and thoroughly grasping the cultural and physical significance of any urban environment within which they dwell.

Courses are offered from one month to a semester at the graduate and undergraduate level. For more information contact program director Paulette Singley (paulette.singley@woodbury.edu) or consult the RCAC website (<http://architecture.woodbury.edu/rcac>).
